SUMMONS CAME PEACEFULLY

Woodrow Wilson Died Without a Parting Word.

UNCONSCIOUS FOR 22 HOURS

Former President Passed Away Painlessly Sunday Forenoon, His Physician Announces—Exhaustion Following Digestive Disturbance Was the Immediate Cause of Death. Condolence Messages Pouring In.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Woodrow Wilson died at 11:15 Sunday morning after 22 hours passed almost entirely in unconsciousness. The end came peacefully and without a parting word.

Mrs. Wilson, Miss Margaret Wilson, a daughter, and Dr. Cary T. Grayson, personal physician, were at the bedside when death came.

The official announcement issued by Dr. Grayson read: "Mr. Wilson died at 11:15. His heart action became feeble and feeble and the heart muscle was so fatigued it refused to act any longer. The end came peacefully. The remote causes of death lie in his ill health, which began more than four years ago, namely arterio-sclerosis, with nephritis. The immediate cause of death was exhaustion following a digestive disturbance, which began in the early part of last week, but which did not reach an acute stage until the early morning hours of Feb. 1."

Only a few minutes before Mr. Wilson's death was announced a note from President Coolidge was delivered at the home. The death bulletin came with dramatic suddenness following receipt of the letter expressing regret over the illness.

Mrs. Wilson, whose constant care for nearly five years had been the failing health of the former president, is bearing up well under the shock of the inevitable death.

The president and Mrs. Coolidge, representing the people of the nation the dead chief had led in the world's greatest war, were the first official callers to arrive at the Wilson home and leave cards of sympathy. They had received the tidings while attending church services, and went direct from the church to the home, where they both left the white house automobile and went to the door of the Wilson house. They left cards with the butler and drove away immediately.

Returning to the white house, the executive shortly issued a proclamation formally announcing the death to the nation and ordering flags over the white house and other government buildings at half-mast, marking the beginning of an official period of mourning to continue for 30 days.

Tense Sorrow Shown.

Tense sorrow marked the circumstances surrounding the announcement of the former president's passing. Earlier reports from the sick room had prepared the watchers for the inevitable statement that the end had come.

The throng outside the Wilson home grew steadily, but silently, as the news spread through the city that the former president had but minutes to live. About an hour before the final announcement the crowd knelt in praying for fully five minutes. No words were spoken aloud, but the silence was broken by stifled sobs. Then came the inevitable announcement. The silent crowd heard and melted slowly away. There was no demonstration.

Word of the death was flashed first to immediate relatives of the former president. A cablegram was sent to Mrs. Frances B. Sayre, a daughter, whose husband is counsellor to the king in far-away Siam. Telegrams were sent to intercept Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, speeding from California in a vain attempt to reach her father's bedside before the end.

There was a steady flow of callers throughout the afternoon. Highest officials of the American government joined with the diplomatic dignitaries of great foreign powers paused for a moment at the door, left cards of condolence and passed on.

From all parts of the world came messages of sympathy in an unbroken stream. Radio, telegraph and telephone had carried the death tidings to the most remote corners, and back came the messages from persons in all walks of life.

Secretary of State Hughes immediately sent cablegrams to all American diplomatic and consular posts informing them of the former president's death and directing that flags be flown at half-mast for 30 days in memory of the dead leader.

Official word to foreign governments was communicated through their diplomatic representatives in Washington.

Congress also took official cognizance of the death of the former chief executive. The senate and house were formally notified by their respective leaders when they convened at noon and both adjourned out of respect, after adopting appropriate resolutions. Adjournment again will be on the day of the funeral.

STATE FUNERAL PLANNED

Ex-President's Body May Be Buried in Arlington Cemetery.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Secretary of War Weeks formally tendered to Mrs. Wilson the use of Arlington cemetery for the interment. It also was announced that the war department was prepared to give Mr. Wilson a full military funeral. Officers at Ft. Meyer, in the suburbs of the capital, and Camp Meade, Maryland, were given tentative orders to hold their troops in readiness for such a service.

Should there be a state funeral, the body doubtless would lie in state under the vast dome of the capitol rotunda, where the ceremonies would take place. There also has been the suggestion from official and congressional quarters that the war president should rest in Arlington cemetery beside those of his comrades in arms who gave their all on the battlefields.

This depends upon the wish of Mrs. Wilson. Mr. McAdoo is expected to counsel acquiescence in this plan.

SEPARATIST REGIME REPORTED CRUMBLING

German Government Expects Its Complete Collapse.

Berlin, Feb. 4.—The German government is elated at the crumbling of the separatist regime in the Palatinate and expects its early and complete collapse. Prussian Prime Minister Braun officially congratulated the government at Wiesbaden, Rheinhessen, Arheilgen and other towns from which they fled under cover of darkness to escape the wrath of the population.

The Germans attribute the retreat of the separatists to the gradual withdrawal of French support, following exposure of their character by British Consul Clive. France, however, is expected to pursue her designs on the Palatinate by other means.

The news of the death of former President Wilson was received with genuine regret in all American circles especially among the members of the American expert commission, which is here to study the economic condition in Germany. Sympathy was general among Germans as well, but there was a tinged trace of bitterness in certain irreconcilable circles. German officials therefore are reticent to express their sympathy publicly for fear of causing embarrassing comments in these circles later.

Chamonix, France, Feb. 4.—Canada defeated the United States, 6 to 1, to win the Olympic hockey championship here. The Canadians also won the hockey honors in the 1920 Olympics.

SAILS FOR SOUTH SEA ISLANDS

Young Doheny Wanted as Witness in Oil Probe.

ABOARD YACHT ON THE PACIFIC

Former Senator Pomerene's Selection as Special Counsel For Prosecution Almost Certain to Be Confirmed by the Senate—Naval Officers Filed Protest Against Proposed Leasing of Oil Reserves to Private Interests.

Washington, Feb. 4.—An interesting development in the seque investigation of the oil lease scandal was the receipt of information by the senate investigating committee that Edward L. Doheny, Jr., wants as a witness in the case, has left the United States on his father's yacht for the South Sea islands.

Young Doheny sailed from Los Angeles harbor a few days after his father told the committee that the $100,000 "loaned" to Albert B. Fall was brought to Washington by his son in a black satchel. When Doheny, Sr., appeared before the committee last Thursday he testified that the $100,000 was loaned to him by his son on checks drawn on the son's bank account in his favor. The committee asked Doheny to produce these checks and also expressed a desire to question young Doheny about the entire transaction. By this time, however, the yacht "Casiana," with young Doheny and a party of friends aboard, is far away from the committee's jurisdiction.

Former Senator Pomerene of Ohio, selected by President Coolidge to assist Silas Strawn in the prosecutions, spent the day in quiet conference with other senators on the facts thus far established in the investigation. Because of Pomerene's high standing in the senate and his record as a fearless prosecutor, it is not believed there will be opposition to his confirmation.

An astonishing revelation in the oil scandal makes public for the first time the buried protests of United States naval officers, who tried to prevent the government from turning the naval reserve oil lands over to private interests.

These protests have been known about, but up to now even the United States senate committee on public lands, which has been investigating the oil scandals, had not been able to locate the actual protests. Photostatic copies of these protests have been turned over to the senate committee.

Naval Officers Filed Protests.

The protests are those of Rear Admiral R. S. Griffin and Commander H. A. Stuart. The oil reserves had been under actual control of Stuart and he was presumed to be the best informed officer in the navy on the oil subject. Publication of the protests at this time are of importance because of the long effort of the senate committee to lay its hands on them.

Commander Stuart said: "Referring to the proposal that the navy department turn over to the department of the interior the naval petroleum reserves for 'conservation, development and operation.' I am of the opinion that such action would constitute a grave error and would be extremely harmful to the interests of the navy. In fact, it is not too much to say that it will mean the beginning of the end of the naval reserves."

Secretary Denby's files revealed a letter to President Harding dated at the time the presidential order giving control was being sought. In this letter Denby said in essence that fairness to the navy required him to say that certain naval officers were against the plan to give Fall control of the oil lands and that he enclosed a copy of a letter from Admiral Griffin.

The enforced postponement of committee hearings on account of former President Wilson's death will not interfere with the examination of stock brokers' books, which is now in progress at the order of the committee. The books of local stock brokerage firms are under subpoena of the federal trade commission are at work to ascertain whether there is truth in the charge that senators, cabinet officers and other high officials of the government made large profits by dealing in Mammoth Oil company stock at about the time the lease of Teapot Dome was made to that company by Fall.

While the investigation committee stands in recess, Fall and Edward L. Doheny are both under directions not to leave the city, but to hold themselves in readiness to answer a committee summons at a moment's notice.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Claim Motive Was Robbery.

Cincinnati, Feb. 4.—The motive for the killing of John A. Mazzola, Central American student at the Ohio Dental college here, was robbery and not because of a woman, detectives working on the case charge. They declare that Halton P. Siddall, a fellow student, who is charged with the crime, sold the diamond from Mazzola's ring in a pawn shop shortly after the body of the slain man was found in the shallow waters of Duck creek.

McGahan Taken to Dayton.

Dayton, O., Feb. 4.—George ("Red") McGahan, notorious underworld character, was brought here from Toledo to face charges growing out of the West Carrollton bank robbery in 1920. Although McGahan will face charges, the indictment returned against him by a Toledo federal grand jury in connection with the Delta bank robbery will remain in force. The capture of McGahan was effected in Marietta.

Reward For Slayer's Arrest.

Canton, O., Feb. 4.—A reward of $500 will be paid by the Ohio Bell Telephone company for the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Miss Florence Nitzman, 19, an operator in the employ of the company, the company announced. Miss Nitzman was murdered here Wednesday night and her body weighed down with stones and thrown into a creek. The body was found Friday noon.

Slain by Chinaman.

Cleveland, Feb. 4.—Sidney Tyson, 30, was shot and killed in a chop suey restaurant. According to police, the Chinese cook, believing him to have designs on the contents of the cash register, fired through a peep hole in a door between the kitchen and dining room. Tyson ran from the restaurant and fell dead upon the sidewalk. The cook and 11 other Chinese are detained.

Proposed Baseball Deal Off.

Cincinnati, Feb. 4.—The proposed purchase of the Columbus American association baseball club by the Cincinnati Nationals has been called off, according to August Herrmann, president of the local club. Jack Hendricks, former manager of the Indianapolis team, who has been conducting the negotiations, has advised against the purchase, Mr. Herrmann said.

Couple Held.

Alliance, O., Feb. 4.—Mildred Drake, 17, and Charles Seacrist, 19, of this city, were arrested at Detroit. According to Seacrist, the pair eloped from Alliance, who said they had not yet been married, because he had not been able to find work to get enough money to secure a marriage license and pay the minister.

For the Best, Says Mrs. Wilson.

Washington, Feb. 4.—"He is rid of his pain and trouble. I am glad he went away peacefully." So spoke Mrs. Wilson soon after the ex-president's death to one of the little family group that were at the bedside of the former president at the end. The same gentleness and self-restraint that have marked Mrs. Wilson since the day her distinguished husband was stricken with illness in 1919 are hers in her deep sorrow.

ONE OF WORLD'S GREATEST MEN

British Statesmen's Opinion of Woodrow Wilson.

OFFICIALS EXPRESS SYMPATHY

Premier MacDonald, David Lloyd George and Others Deplore the Death of the Former President. Former Declares He Had a Fine Vision of Reason in Leading Europe Back to Peace and Security.

London, Feb. 4.—Premier Ramsay MacDonald, who was at Chequers, the premier's country residence, learned of the death of Woodrow Wilson within 15 minutes after the former president's demise. He made this statement:

"I am greatly grieved to hear of the death of former President Woodrow Wilson and I know that the whole British nation shares my feelings. Mr. Wilson had a fine vision of reason and wisdom in leading Europe back to peace and security. It was a vision of the highest, for the earth too high, perhaps, and he has gone before its fulfillment. In time to come people will look back upon him and the part he played, and generous judgment will be easy, because he will be recognized as one of the world's great pioneers."

T. P. O'Connor expressed sorrow, saying: "I regard President Wilson as one of the greatest men America ever produced and I deplore the tragic gleam in which his life ended."

Former Premier Lloyd George, at his country home at Churt, Hindhead, dictated the following statement: "What was said of Lincoln after his death is equally true of Woodrow Wilson—he now belongs to the ages. His is a great and growing name. It will be forever associated with the greatest of human causes, for brotherhood among nations."

The Daily News in an editorial said: "He stood head and shoulders above all other rulers of our time as one man who saw clearly the light of truth in a world of menacing nations, and who had the courage to transform his vision into a single dominating policy. His life for this alone and his name deserves to be cherished and honored down the ages."

The Daily Chronicle said: "We are chiefly impressed by the personal tragedy of the awe-inspiring contrast between the idealist colossus who bestrided the world in 1918 and 1919 and the broken, abandoned idol of 1920."

The Daily Mail said: "No country will share more intensely and worldwide sympathy than Great Britain. It will be difficult to find the counterpart of the popular enthusiasm and confidence that attended Wilson in his trip to Versailles. No man ever raised or disappointed more hopes of a new heaven on earth. His misfortune was that he had not a deeper understanding of European history or the political life of his own country."

The Times said: "With all his faults he was a great American, who played for a brief space a greater part of the world's affairs than any of his predecessors. He was a famous professor of politics, who for a while had the world as his classroom."

To Study American Methods.

New York, Feb. 4.—Over to study American business methods has come France's foremost business woman. "I want to know how you wonderful people do, I want to make my factory better," said Madame Vionnet, creator of fashions. "It is because I am such a good American," Madame explained when she was called the best business woman in France. "I love America and I have taken as much of her methods as possible." The Vionnet establishment in Paris bears the reputation of being the only French factory run on American lines. It is a huge place, employing over 1,000 persons.

Marshal Pays Tribute.

Indianapolis, Feb. 4.—Former Vice President Thomas R. Marshall said concerning Mr. Wilson's death: "It is with sincere regret that I notice what the world calls the death of Woodrow Wilson. Humanly speaking, he is dead, and with his passage from mortal contact there has gone a great influence for justice and brotherhood. The only consolation, therefore, is in the belief that high thoughts and splendid purposes do not die with our common mortality. Whatever, therefore, in the life of this great man was intended for the good of the world will live on and find its eventual accomplishment."

CRABBE URGES FROBE

Would Have Legislature Reconvene to Consider State Problems.

Columbus, Feb. 4.—Attorney General Crabbe, in a letter addressed to members of the committee named by the general assembly to recall that body whenever demanded by the "state of affairs in the state," declares that his investigations have revealed a state of affairs in the state securities division which, if probed by a legislative committee and all of the "crookedness brought to light," would make "the Teapot Dome scandal look small." Should the solons reconvene as merely recessed, the attorney general pointed out, it would be possible for them to consider "other pressing matters" besides the alleged irregularities in the securities division. Among these, he indicated he believed some attention should be paid to the requests of city officials for financial relief, and also that the state building commission law should be amended so as to permit the erection of additions to the state house rather than the purchase of a "site contiguous to the state house" for the purpose of building a new building, as the law now provides. Governor Donahy refused to comment on Crabbe's effort to recall the legislature.

Reward For Slayer's Arrest.

Canton, O., Feb. 4.—A reward of $500 will be paid by the Ohio Bell Telephone company for the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Miss Florence Nitzman, 19, an operator in the employ of the company, the company announced. Miss Nitzman was murdered here Wednesday night and her body weighed down with stones and thrown into a creek. The body was found Friday noon.

Slain by Chinaman.

Cleveland, Feb. 4.—Sidney Tyson, 30, was shot and killed in a chop suey restaurant. According to police, the Chinese cook, believing him to have designs on the contents of the cash register, fired through a peep hole in a door between the kitchen and dining room. Tyson ran from the restaurant and fell dead upon the sidewalk. The cook and 11 other Chinese are detained.

Proposed Baseball Deal Off.

Cincinnati, Feb. 4.—The proposed purchase of the Columbus American association baseball club by the Cincinnati Nationals has been called off, according to August Herrmann, president of the local club. Jack Hendricks, former manager of the Indianapolis team, who has been conducting the negotiations, has advised against the purchase, Mr. Herrmann said.

Couple Held.

Alliance, O., Feb. 4.—Mildred Drake, 17, and Charles Seacrist, 19, of this city, were arrested at Detroit. According to Seacrist, the pair eloped from Alliance, who said they had not yet been married, because he had not been able to find work to get enough money to secure a marriage license and pay the minister.

For the Best, Says Mrs. Wilson.

Washington, Feb. 4.—"He is rid of his pain and trouble. I am glad he went away peacefully." So spoke Mrs. Wilson soon after the ex-president's death to one of the little family group that were at the bedside of the former president at the end. The same gentleness and self-restraint that have marked Mrs. Wilson since the day her distinguished husband was stricken with illness in 1919 are hers in her deep sorrow.

ONE OF WORLD'S GREATEST MEN

British Statesmen's Opinion of Woodrow Wilson.

OFFICIALS EXPRESS SYMPATHY

Premier MacDonald, David Lloyd George and Others Deplore the Death of the Former President. Former Declares He Had a Fine Vision of Reason in Leading Europe Back to Peace and Security.

London, Feb. 4.—Premier Ramsay MacDonald, who was at Chequers, the premier's country residence, learned of the death of Woodrow Wilson within 15 minutes after the former president's demise. He made this statement:

"I am greatly grieved to hear of the death of former President Woodrow Wilson and I know that the whole British nation shares my feelings. Mr. Wilson had a fine vision of reason and wisdom in leading Europe back to peace and security. It was a vision of the highest, for the earth too high, perhaps, and he has gone before its fulfillment. In time to come people will look back upon him and the part he played, and generous judgment will be easy, because he will be recognized as one of the world's great pioneers."

T. P. O'Connor expressed sorrow, saying: "I regard President Wilson as one of the greatest men America ever produced and I deplore the tragic gleam in which his life ended." Former Premier Lloyd George, at his country home at Churt, Hindhead, dictated the following statement: "What was said of Lincoln after his death is equally true of Woodrow Wilson—he now belongs to the ages. He is a great and growing name. It will be forever associated with the greatest of human causes, for brotherhood among nations."

The Daily News in an editorial said: "He stood head and shoulders above all other rulers of our time as one man who saw clearly the light of truth in a world of menacing nations, and who had the courage to transform his vision into a single dominating policy. His life for this alone and his name deserves to be cherished and honored down the ages."

The Daily Chronicle said: "We are chiefly impressed by the personal tragedy of the awe-inspiring contrast between the idealist colossus who bestrode the world in 1918 and 1919 and the broken, abandoned idol of 1920."

The Daily Mail said: "No country will share more intensely and worldwide sympathy than Great Britain. It will be difficult to find the counterpart of the popular enthusiasm and confidence that attended Wilson in his trip to Versailles. No man ever raised or disappointed more hopes of a new heaven on earth. His misfortune was that he had not a deeper understanding of European history or the political life of his own country."

The Times said: "With all his faults he was a great American, who played for a brief space a greater part of the world's affairs than any of his predecessors. He was a famous professor of politics, who for a while had the world as his classroom."

To Study American Methods.

New York, Feb. 4.—Over to study American business methods has come France's foremost business woman. "I want to know how your wonderful people do, I want to make my factory better," said Madame Vionnet, creator of fashions. "It is because I am such a good American," Madame explained when she was called the best business woman in France. "I love America and I have taken as much of her methods as possible." The Vionnet establishment in Paris bears the reputation of being the only French factory run on American lines. It is a huge place, employing over 1,000 persons.

Marshall Pays Tribute.

Indianapolis, Feb. 4.—Former Vice President Thomas R. Marshall said concerning Mr. Wilson's death: "It is with sincere regret that I notice what the world calls the death of Woodrow Wilson. Humanly speaking, he is dead, and with his passage from mortal contact there has gone a great influence for justice and brotherhood. The only consolation, therefore, is in the belief that high thoughts and splendid purposes do not die with our common mortality. Whatever, therefore, in the life of this great man was intended for the good of the world will live on and find its eventual accomplishment."

CRABBE URGES PROBE

Would Have Legislature Reconvene to Consider State Problems.

Columbus, Feb. 4.—Attorney General Crabbe, in a letter addressed to members of the committee named by the general assembly to recall that body whenever demanded by the "state of affairs in the state," declares that his investigations have revealed a state of affairs in the state securities division which, if probed by a legislative committee and all of the "crookedness brought to light," would make "the Teapot Dome scandal look small." Should the solons reconvene as merely recessed, the attorney general pointed out, it would be possible for them to consider "other pressing matters" besides the alleged irregularities in the securities division. Among these, he indicated he believed some attention should be paid to the requests of city officials for financial relief, and also that the state building commission law should be amended so as to permit the erection of additions to the state house rather than the purchase of a "site contiguous to the state house" for the purpose of building a new building, as the law now provides. Governor Donahy refused to comment on Crabbe's effort to recall the legislature.

HERE AND THERE

A gas explosion wrecked the four-story building of the Bailey-Reynolds company at Kansas City, Mo. Claude O. Jones was killed and two others fatally injured.

Three-masted schooner President Coaker, owned by the Fishermen's Union Trading company of Port Union, N. F., is believed to have been lost with all hands in a storm off Cape Race.

Bill to accept Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals was formally reported to the house of representatives with a recommendation from the house military committee for its adoption.

Prince Don Mario Colonna and Tullio Giordana, editor of the Tribuna, were both severely wounded in a duel at Rome.

Gee Jon, Chinese sentenced to die by lethal gas in the state prison at Carson City, Nev., Feb. 8, has lost his mind, his attorney, J. M. Frame of Reno, Nev., said after a visit to Jon in the death cell.

GABRIELLE'S WAYS

By MOLLIE MATHER

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

PHILIP RADCLIFF turned to his mother.

"I am afraid this is going to be hard for you," he said.

"My brother's daughter has not had the environment to make her a fitting companion for you, nor a useful occupant of a ministerial household. But we must do our duty by Gordon's child, as he asked us in the last letter he ever wrote. The telegram received states that she will be with us this evening. I shall meet her at the station."

Mrs. Radcliff smiled, but she was herself apprehensive regarding the adoption of this unknown member of the family.

The departed Gordon had often written of his daughter Gabrielle's willful ways, inherited, Mrs. Radcliff feared, from the disapproved mother. Gordon had truly loved the little actress who had captivated him. The ministerial career planned and sacrificed for by the elder Gordon, dead now, had to be renounced in the swift choosing of actual paying labor.

Philip, the younger brother, had acceded to his father's wish, and was the minister of his heart.

Gordon's pretty, unknown wife had left the world as her tiny daughter entered it. The maternal grandmother had raised the child, Gabrielle, until almost with her first "ankle skirt," she had inevitably followed in her mother's gay profession.

Gabrielle proved competent to care for herself, and the letter written to his brother some years ago in her behalf was merely a father's last desire for some sort of guardianship over her.

The telegram received into the pastor's quiet household was unexpected and disturbing.

"Read Gabrielle's own words, my dear," Philip's mother requested. "It is not, after all, strange that she should turn to us, now that she is quite alone in the world, no matter how successful in her unfortunate career."

Philip, a troubled frown on his fine forehead, obeyed.

"Gabrielle will arrive tomorrow, Wed. evening, in Rosemont. Kindly meet 5:20 limited."

"Brief, and to the point," he remarked.

"I believe," he said, "that the understanding from my niece's last letter was that when she should decide to come to us it would be to stay?"

Mrs. Radcliff nodded.

"The girl may be in ill health," she replied, "and in need of true care. We will be very kind to my son's child and very patient."

"Of course," he agreed. But he awaited the passenger's descent from the 5:20 train apprehensively.

A low voice greeted him. He had been watching a modish young person who came down the car steps. This young woman who stood smiling beside him was almost somber in attire, becoming, certainly, but simple.

"Mr. Radcliff?" she questioned. "You came to meet Gabrielle, did you not?"

Too much astonished to reply, he assisted her silently into his car. The small person sank back with a sigh of satisfaction.

"I'm so glad I'm here at last," she remarked; "it has been a wearisome journey."

Her very smile had won him; the soft tone of her voice was pleasantly thrilling. Philip Radcliff was not aware of the words that gentle voice was saying.

But presently he became aware, and his dark gaze widened.

"Gabrielle wanted me to see you personally and tell you about it. You see, I happened to be coming this way—looking into a position as companion. Gabrielle and I traveled part way together. She is to be married tonight, and she said, 'It would be so nice, Janey, if you'd stop over at Rosemont and prepare my relatives. You can follow my telegram instead, and we will go on later. Charles—that's her husband-to-be—and I—Gabrielle does appreciate your interest in her, and she is settling down to domesticity with a worthy young man.'

"I may as well explain," said Janey, "that Gabrielle is the best friend I have. We met accidentally when my mother was doing her fine sewing; when mother died I carried on the work among a certain few kind actresses. Gabrielle was the kindest of them all. Now she has found for me the position for which I shall apply. I have a sealed note from Gabrielle to Mrs. Radcliff, her grandmother. I shall see her?"

"Very soon," Philip said.

The sealed letter from Gabrielle was enlightening. Her grandmother read it slowly, her eyes from time to time raised to the face of the messenger, near by. As she read the last line of the letter she arose, putting forth a welcoming hand.

"My dear," she said to Janey, "my granddaughter has evidently surprised us both. She suggests that I inform you that I am the one to whom she would send you as a companion. And if we like each other—Gabrielle says—you need travel no farther. May we persuade you to stay on with us until we learn to know each other?"

Janey Gray's eyes were rapturous. "I do believe," she said, "that this was Gabrielle's way of bequeathing to me the home she did not need."

"Then that's settled," Philip Radcliff said, and picked up Janey's modest bag to carry it to the waiting room upstairs.

First to Scale High Peak.

Mount Washington, in Oregon, was scaled in August last for the first time on record. Six boys from Bend, Ore., none more than 21 years old, after hours of arduous work reached the top-most pinnacle. At one time a member of the party lost his foothold and clung desperately to the face of a perpendicular cliff, with an 800-foot abyss yawning beneath him. A tube containing their names, the story of the climb, and small personal effects, was left at the top to substantiate their claim. They slid down the dangerous part of the pinnacle by means of a rope which could not be disengaged and still remains on the peak.

Beginning of Great Institution.
On the 10th of January, in 1870, the Standard Oil company was incorporated at Cleveland under the laws of Ohio. John D. Rockefeller was elected president. The other incorporators were Henry Flagler, Samuel Andrews, Stephen Harkness and William Rockefeller. The company was capitalized at $1,000,000.

Floating Panel Hangs
Below Hem of Skirt

For the woman who clings to the beloved soft gown Vionet is creating delightful models, reveling in the satin crepes, employing the floating panel that ripples below the skirt hem, using now and then a jeweled motif and seldom any trimming beyond a single outlining row of rhinestones, of which she is frankly fond.

One such sample of the artist's talent, notes a fashion writer in the New York Times, is in pale yellow flat crepe. The frock proper is a chemise, cut V in the neck in front, round at the back and sleeveless. Marking the waistline at the hips, a square of the material is gathered slightly on at each side, half the width of the material, and left loose to cascade almost to the floor. The gown is plain in the back, the skirt gathered slightly to the bodice. A line of brilliant edges the neck and hangs like a necklace, front and back, finished with a pretty ornament of the stones. This rhinestone outline marks also the under arm seams and another such ornament finishes at each side.

There is no effort at elaborating this gown which the author's imitators have reproduced in countless ways, materials and colors. Vionet goes in also for the front drapery that marks a striking contrast to the back of the frock, which is straight from the neck to the hem. Without reason or apology a piece of the material is set, plaited or gathered in the middle of the front of the dress, fastening across the low waistline and hanging almost to the floor, to be stumbled over, never to be held aside, if the wearer be au fait.

Colorful Effects in Fashionable Jewelry

One might suppose that after the continued craze for the wearing of so much jewelry a reaction would be in order. Not only has this reaction not occurred but the demand for all sorts of novelties in the way of bracelets, pendants, earrings and other ornaments seems to grow stronger each day and jewelry, both with the Parisienne and the American woman, becomes more and more elaborate with an increasing number of pieces worn at one time.

Jewelry is colorful this winter. The entire gamut of semi-precious stones is worn during the day in vivid and contrasting colors—red and black effects in coral and onyx and green and blue colorings in jade and lapis. They are worn as necklaces, as earrings and as bracelets. Even watch bracelets, which used to be worn mostly on black ribbon are now worn on bright red ribbon by the very smartest women.

Among the new vogues sponsored is the "brooch cliquet," or double-headed pins, which are worn in the daytime as hatpins and also as an ornament at the waist. These pins are very often composed of valuable stones.

Robin Hood Hat.

An endearing piece of headgear of narrow-brimmed soft felt holds beneath its snug band of black-bordered tapestry ribbon a single long, straight feather tilted across the brim at a jaunty angle.

New Brassiere.

A new type of brassiere is made with criss-cross boning across the diaphragm. It was designed to give support where many women need it, and to give the flat silhouette so fashionable now.

Prejudices Against Speed.
One hundred years ago the United States postal service first operated stage coaches at night between New York and Boston. People protested that it was too dangerous. The first trip did result in a fatal accident. The same attitude greeted the coming of the railways. Here is a letter written in March, 1825, by Thomas Creevey, M. P., about the first railroad bill read in the British parliament: "I have come to the conclusion that our Ferguson is insane. He quite foamed at the mouth with rage in our railway committee in support of this infernal nuisance—the locomotive monster, carrying 80 tons of goods, and navigated by a tail of smoke and sulphur coming through every man's grounds between Manchester and Liverpool."

Fasting Among Negroes.
In the earlier days fasting among negroes was a common custom precedent to conversion. Dr. Charles T. Walker, a distinguished preacher of the colored race, known as the "Black Surgeon," describes his own experience in his biography, the Detroit News states. On Wednesday of a certain week in the month of June, while he was hoeing cotton, Walker decided to become a "seeker." He followed the usual custom. When he reached the end of the row, without saying a word to anybody, he jumped over the fence, and went into the woods. Without eating or drinking, without seeing anyone, he remained in the woods until the following Saturday afternoon, when he was "happily converted."

Mesopotamia's Old Glories.
Nebuchadnezzar's vast irrigation system, which once watered all Babylonia, can still be easily traced for miles about Bagdad. One giant canal, the Narawan, runs parallel with the Tigris for nearly 300 miles; it is 350 feet wide, and all about it the takeoff and laterals may still be identified. Herodotus said he found a "forest of verdure from end to end" when he visited Mesopotamia.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.

PRESIDENT WILSON DEAD.

Woodrow Wilson is dead, a martyr to the exacting duties of the presidency of the United States.

President Wilson will go down in history as a man of lofty ideals and great accomplishments. He served his country in one of the most trying periods of all time, and did much for the betterment of the nation and the world.

His scholastic attainments were of the highest order and his grasp of intricate questions of statecraft and his devotion to his ideals made him a most commanding figure in the troublous times in which he bore so conspicuous a part.

Those who did not agree with him, cheerfully bear testimony to his honesty of purpose and his real greatness. In every situation, he was dependable, outspoken and conscientious. He had a mind of his own and was dominated by no individual or group.

A great man has fallen before his time, a sacrifice to the arduous duties of the presidency. Some plan should be devised to lighten the labors of this great office and avoid this frightful toll on the lives of our rulers.

The Man.

Balzac left in manuscript a chapter which he called "Theorie de la Demarche," in which he says, "The look, the voice, the respiration and the attitude or walk are identical. But, as it has not been given to man the power to stand guard at once over these four different simultaneous expressions of his thought, watch that one which speaks out the truth, and you will know the whole man."—Life of Balzac.

Cause of Trojan War Told in Homer's Iliad

According to Homer's Iliad, the Trojan war was an expedition against the city of Troy, engaged in by the combined princes of Greece, led by Agamemnon, king of Mycenae. Paris, the son of Priam, king of Troy, having awarded the prize for superior beauty to Venus in preference to Juno and Minerva, was promised by that goddess the most beautiful woman of the age for his wife. Soon after this he visited Menelaus, king of Sparta, and was received with great respect, but abused the hospitality shown him by inducing Helen, the wife of his host, to elope with him to Troy. The Grecian princes resolved to avenge this outrage, and sailed for Troy with an army of 100,000 men, conveyed thither in 1,200 open vessels. After a siege of ten years, the city was taken by stratagem, plundered and then burned (1184 B. C.). The aged king Priam was slain, and his family was led into captivity. Among the famous princes that distinguished themselves in the Trojan war may be named Achilles, Ajax, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor and Diomedes. The Trojans were commanded by Hector, the son of Priam, and assisted by Paris, Deiphobus, Aeneas and Sarpedon.

Fights Cancer With X-Ray

Cancer, most insidious of diseases and one that has defied medical science for generations is to be again attacked, this time by Dr. Lewis Friedman, with an X-ray of 250,000 volts. Dr. Friedman is a noted radiologist and cancer specialist and holds forth great hope for success in his new experiments. He says that the rays from his machine are identical with some radium rays, and by its use hopes to make progress in the fight to drive out the cancer scourge. So far he has obtained very favorable results with the powerful ray, and has announced that in a far advanced case which he had treated he had reduced one dimension of an internal abdominal cancer three-quarters of an inch, using the extremely high voltage of 250,000. Radium has been tried on a number of patients and in many cases a fair degree of success attended the efforts, but Dr. Friedman hopes to accomplish even more with his new machine.

600 Years From Earth

There is some uncertainty as to the distance of the Orion stars, writes Isabel M. Lewis of the United States naval observatory, but it is known to be much greater than that of the Pleiades and Hyades and the most reliable estimate is about six hundred light years. If we prefer to think in terms of miles, which is not a very wise thing to do when speaking of star distances, we find that this is equal to about thirty-six hundred trillion miles (3,600,000,000,000,000), or nearly forty million times the distance from the earth to the sun! With its tremendous speed of 186,000 miles in a second, light takes six centuries to cover the distance.

The red star Betelgeuse, varying irregularly in brightness, is not a member of the Orion group, but, as its color indicates, is a star of an entirely different type. Its distance of 160 light years is only about one-fourth of that of the Orion group.—Nature Magazine.

A Great Shock

The late Sir Charles Hawtreys, the English actor, was being praised in a New York club.

"Hawtreys," said a comedian, "once told me about a trip he made to India. He complimented the Anglo-Indians for their elegance, but he said their slang was very hard to understand."

"He said that at a dinner party in Simla he was praising the smart equipages he had seen everywhere when a pretty girl on his left touched his ear coquettishly:

"I must show you my tum-tum tomorrow. I have just had it painted black and yellow."

"Hawtreys said that when he came to they explained to him that 'tum-tum' was the Anglo-Indian slang for 'dogcart.'"

New Butter Process

A new method of butter manufacture is now being tried in Holland and is meeting with success in delaying the deterioration of butter, says the Scientific American. The new process consists in churning in an atmosphere of pure carbon dioxide. The air is sucked out of the churn and is replaced by carbon dioxide, which fills the pores of the butter and keeps out the oxygen so long as the butter is not vigorously agitated after exposure to the air. The natural process of deterioration is accelerated by oxygen. The cost of the new process is said to be negligible in view of the advantage gained.

To Keep Clock Running

Take a piece of thick woolen cloth, soak it in coal oil and lay it inside the shelf of a hall clock underneath the pendulum or inside it. The vapor goes up and you will never need to oil the clock. Always soak the same woolen cloth two or three inches in kerosene every three or six months. The same thing can be used in a hanging clock or a shelf clock that has a pendulum.

Wet Battery Light

An electric flashlight operated by a wet battery is so constructed that the electrolyte comes in contact with the plates and provides current only when the light is in use.

EX-PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON

PRESIDENT WILSON WAS HUMAN PHENOMENON OF GREATEST WAR

At 54 No More Than a University Professor and Political Writer; at 63 in a Place of Power and Fame and Honor Unsurpassed in History—Defended His Unsuccessful Peace Policies to the Last.

History, in determining the place of Woodrow Wilson, 28th president of the United States of America, will pass judgment upon the most prominent world-figure of the events growing out of the most momentous war of all time. From the viewpoint of hundreds of millions of lovers of liberty Woodrow Wilson stood at the zenith, as the ex-kaiser stands at the nadir.

The great war brought to the front many men whose names will live in honor. In the last analysis three men stand out: Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau. Of these three it was Wilson who held the world's eye—Wilson, the human phenomenon of the times, until fifty-four no more than a college president and political writer and at sixty-three on a pinnacle of fame and honor and power—unsurpassed if ever attained by any man in history.

It is impossible now to differentiate between Woodrow Wilson the man and Woodrow Wilson the head of the most powerful nation of earth in wealth, material and fighting men. Certainly he could not have reached the place he held without great ability and extraordinary capacity for leadership. By virtue of his place he became a focus of world attention as soon as the great war began. Before the armistice was signed he had become a great moral leader with the ear of the peoples of the world. Only as such could he have forced upon the allied world the unofficial acceptance of his project of a league of nations, with its fourteen points as set forth to congress January 18, 1918.

The enthusiasm evoked by President Wilson's visits to Paris, London and Rome was proof of his unique place in the regard of the people. It was evident that he was to Europeans not so much a man as a voice—a voice putting into words what they wanted and had not been able to express; his ideas and ideals were a sort of religion to them.

But he showed himself a statesman as well as a voice. He played the game masterfully. He established sympathy between himself and his man or his crowd. He made few if any mistakes in taste or judgment. He "matched his mind," to use his own expression, with the best of Europe and he got his league of nations before the peace conference and got it adopted.

President Wilson's two months in Europe may be divided into phases. When he landed the attitude toward the league of nations was this: The government of France was antagonistic; Great Britain's was suspicious; Italy's was skeptical. The first phase, his triumphant progress through France, England and Italy opened the eyes of these governments to his hold on the people. The second phase, the preliminary work of the peace conference, convinced these governments that President Wilson had an idea rather than a set plan which he purposed to force upon them. This simplified the situation and the rush to climb on the bandwagon began.

Contemporary estimates of President Wilson at home were as wide apart as the poles. Senator J. Thomas Hefflin (Dem., Ala.), when representative spoke on the floor of "Woodrow Wilson, the greatest apostle of world liberty and democracy since Jesus Christ." Senator Thomas W. Hardwick (Dem.) of Georgia, said January 21 in the senate: "I believe in a written constitution, I believe in a strict interpretation of it . . . and I believe that unless we leave and abandon this mad saturnal of imperialism here at home and return to the ancient principles of our fathers there will be no safety nor happiness for the people of this republic."

Senator Albert B. Cummins (Rep.) of Iowa expressed the half-way view when he said in the senate January 23: "I think President Wilson is the most intensely practical statesman of this or any other day. He began his administration in the belief that the executive office had not the power that it ought to have. He has accomplished more in the direction in which he set his face and his mind than any other man, either in this generation or in any former generation; and the only criticism, if it be a criticism, is that he has not marched in the right direction and has done things that he ought not to have done."

In the process of wresting from congress all the powers he believed the Constitution conferred upon the executive, President Wilson made many political enemies who questioned not his ability, but his motives and methods. To particularize would be largely to review the political history of the last six years. The railroad situation, however, may be cited as an example. Representative E. E. Denison (Rep.) of Illinois said January 15, 1919, "Government ownership of railroads will be the dominant political issue in the next national campaign and Mr. McAdoo will of course expect to be the candidate of his party. He will hope to capitalize what has been done for the railroad men."

President Wilson was re-elected in 1916 upon a peace platform. October 23, 1918, just before the congressional elections, he issued an appeal to the voters of the United States asking them, if they had approved of his leadership and wished him to continue to be their unembarrassed spokesman in affairs at home and abroad, to express themselves unmistakably to that effect by returning a Democratic majority to both houses. The result of the elections was to change the political complexion of both houses as follows: 65th congress—Senate, 51 Democrats and 45 Republicans; house, 215 Republicans and 213 Democrats; 66th congress—Senate, 47 Democrats and 49 Republicans; house, 239 Republicans and 193 Democrats.

President Wilson in attending the peace conference made several new departures. He left the country during office. He took the office with him, signing acts and making appointments while in Paris. He ignored the senate, though he is empowered by the Constitution to make treaties "by and with the advice and consent of the senate."

He appointed as the American representatives himself, Secretary of State Robert Lansing, Henry White, Edward M. House and General Tasker H. Bliss. He sailed December 4, 1918, and arrived at Paris December 14. The French capital was en fete for the occasion. December 24 he went to England and thence to Italy. He returned to Paris January 8, after a journey that resembled a "triumphal procession."

After the preliminary sessions of the peace conference President Wilson returned to the United States in February, returning to Paris March 15, 1919. He signed the peace treaty June 28, 1919, and returned to the United States July 8. His second term as president expired March 3, 1920.

After his retirement from the presidency Mr. Wilson lived quietly, making a partly successful fight to regain his health. He occasionally went to the theater and rode much in his car about the environs of Washington. He bought a home in Washington and in 1921 formed a law partnership with Baldwin Colby, who had been his secretary of state, succeeding Robert Lansing. He took part in the funeral procession of President Harding in Washington and was the recipient of much public attention.

Mr. Wilson's last public utterance was last fall. November 10, 1923, the eve of Armistice day, he spoke by radio to the American people, defending his peace policy and saying that the American people had withdrawn into a "sullen and selfish isolation which is deeply ignoble because manifestly cowardly and dishonorable."

Armistice day Mr. Wilson briefly addressed thousands from the front steps of his home, concluding thus:

"I am not one of those that have the least anxiety about the triumph of the principles I have stood for. I have seen fools resist Providence before and I have seen their destruction, as will come upon these again—utter destruction and contempt. That we shall prevail is as sure as that God reigns. Thank you."

Chronology of Wilson.

Woodrow Wilson was born December 28, 1856, in Staunton, Va. He was the son of Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, a Presbyterian minister, and Jessie (Woodrow) Wilson. In 1885 he married Ellen Louise Axsen. December 18, 1915, Mr. Wilson married Edith (Boiling) Galt, a descendant of Pocahontas. The first 29 years of Mr. Wilson's life covered his boyhood and education. The next 25 were devoted to teaching and writing. With his election to the governorship of New Jersey in 1910 began his active political career. His chronology follows:

Tax Returns Show More Women Are in Business

Washington.—Women are more active now in the business world than ever before in the history of the nation. Treasury department statistics show that since the war the number of women who earn incomes large enough to be taxed has tripled.

For the tax year 1921 there were 89,634 wives who filed income tax returns separately from their husbands' returns, upon which a tax of $43,541,348 was paid. For the same year women who were heads of families filed 115,356 income tax returns, on which $10,848,457 was collected in tax, while all other women filed 608,829 income tax returns, on which $58,610,664 was taxed.

For the tax year 1920 there were 77,558 wives, separate from their husbands, who filed income tax returns; women who were heads of families filed 132,131 tax returns, while all other women filed 502,630.

Incompatibility.
 It is said that the average Chicago family spends fifty-one cents a year for books, and we do not see any immediate hope of friendly relations being established between the Windy city and Boston.—Newark (O.) Advocate.

A great man has fallen before his time, a sacrifice to the arduous duties of the presidency. Some plan should be devised to lighten the labors of this great office and avoid this frightful toll on the lives of our rulers.

The Man.
 Balzac left in manuscript a chapter which he called "Theorie de la Demarche," in which he says, "The look, the voice, the respiration and the attitude or walk are identical. But, as it has not been given to man the power to stand guard at once over these four different simultaneous expressions of his thought, watch that one which speaks out the truth, and you will know the whole man."—Life of Balzac.

Cause of Trojan War Told in Homer's Iliad

According to Homer's Iliad, the Trojan war was an expedition against the city of Troy, engaged in by the combined princes of Greece, led by Agamemnon, king of Mycenae. Paris, the son of Priam, king of Troy, having awarded the prize for superior beauty to Venus in preference to Juno and Minerva, was promised by that goddess the most beautiful woman of the age for his wife. Soon after this he visited Menelaus, king of Sparta, and was received with great respect, but abused the hospitality shown him by inducing Helen, the wife of his host, to elope with him to Troy. The Grecian princes resolved to avenge this outrage, and sailed for Troy with an army of 100,000 men, conveyed thither in 1,200 open vessels. After a siege of ten years, the city was taken by stratagem, plundered and then burned (1184 B. C.). The aged king Priam was slain, and his family was led into captivity. Among the famous princes that distinguished themselves in the Trojan war may be named Achilles, Ajax, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor and Diomedes. The Trojans were commanded by Hector, the son of Priam, and assisted by Paris, Delphobus, Aeneas and Sarpedon.

Fights Cancer With X-Ray

Cancer, most insidious of diseases and one that has defied medical science for generations is to be again attacked, this time by Dr. Lewis Friedman, with an X-ray of 250,000 volts. Dr. Friedman is a noted radiologist and cancer specialist and holds forth great hope for success in his new experiments. He says that the rays from his machine are identical with some radium rays, and by its use hopes to make progress in the fight to drive out the cancer scourge. So far he has obtained very favorable results with the powerful ray, and has announced that in a far advanced case which he had treated he had reduced one dimension of an internal abdominal cancer three-quarters of an inch, using the extremely high voltage of 250,000. Radium has been tried on a number of patients and in many cases a fair degree of success attended the efforts, but Dr. Friedman hopes to accomplish even more with his new machine.

600 Years From Earth

There is some uncertainty as to the distance of the Orion stars, writes Isabel M. Lewis of the United States naval observatory, but it is known to be much greater than that of the Pleiades and Hyades and the most reliable estimate is about six hundred light years. If we prefer to think in terms of miles, which is not a very wise thing to do when speaking of star distances, we find that this is equal to about thirty-six hundred trillion miles (3,600,000,000,000,000), or nearly forty million times the distance from the earth to the sun! With its tremendous speed of 186,000 miles in a second, light takes six centuries to cover the distance.

The red star Betelgeuse, varying irregularly in brightness, is not a member of the Orion group, but, as its color indicates, is a star of an entirely different type. Its distance of 160 light years is only about one-fourth of that of the Orion group.—Nature Magazine.

A Great Shock

The late Sir Charles Hawtrey, the English actor, was being praised in a New York club.

"Hawtrey," said a comedian, "once told me about a trip he made to India. He complimented the Anglo-Indians for their elegance, but he said their slang was very hard to understand."

"He said that at a dinner party in Simla he was praising the smart equipages he had seen everywhere when a pretty girl on his left touched his ear coquettishly:

"I must show you my tum-tum tomorrow. I have just had it painted black and yellow."

"Hawtrey said that when he came to they explained to him that 'tum-tum' was the Anglo-Indian slang for 'dogcart.'"

New Butter Process

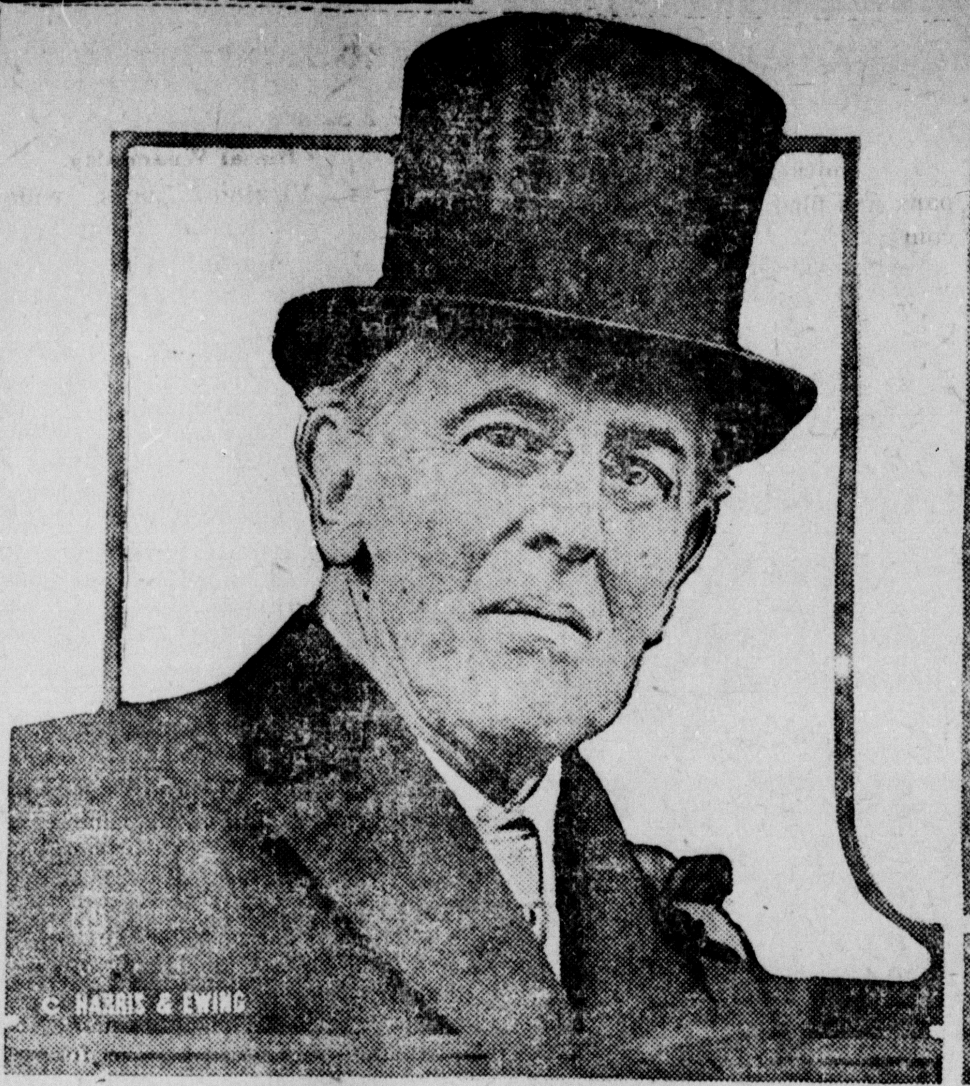

A new method of butter manufacture is now being tried in Holland and is meeting with success in delaying the deterioration of butter, says the Scientific American. The new process consists in churning in an atmosphere of pure carbon dioxide. The air is sucked out of the churn and is replaced by carbon dioxide, which fills the pores of the butter and keeps out the oxygen so long as the butter is not vigorously agitated after exposure to the air. The natural process of deterioration is accelerated by oxygen. The cost of the new process is said to be negligible in view of the advantage gained.

To Keep Clock Running

Take a piece of thick woolen cloth, soak it in coal oil and lay it inside the shelf of a hall clock underneath the pendulum or inside it. The vapor goes up and you will never need to oil the clock. Always soak the same woolen cloth two or three inches in kerosene every three or six months. The same thing can be used in a hanging clock or a shelf clock that has a pendulum.

Wet Battery Light

An electric flashlight operated by a wet battery is so constructed that the electrolyte comes in contact with the plates and provides current only when the light is in use.

EX-PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON

PRESIDENT WILSON WAS HUMAN PHENOMENON OF GREATEST WAR

At 54 No More Than a University Professor and Political Writer; at 63 in a Place of Power and Fame and Honor Unsurpassed in History—Defended His Unsuccessful Peace Policies to the Last.

History, in determining the place of Woodrow Wilson, 28th president of the United States of America, will pass judgment upon the most prominent world-figure of the events growing out of the most momentous war of all time. From the viewpoint of hundreds of millions of lovers of liberty Woodrow Wilson stood at the zenith, as the ex-kaiser stands at the nadir.

The great war brought to the front many men whose names will live in honor. In the last analysis three men stand out: Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau. Of these three it was Wilson who held the world's eye—Wilson, the human phenomenon of the times, until fifty-four no more than a college president and political writer and at sixty-three on a pinnacle of fame and honor and power—unsurpassed if ever attained by any man in history.

It is impossible now to differentiate between Woodrow Wilson the man and Woodrow Wilson the head of the most powerful nation of earth in wealth, material and fighting men. Certainly he could not have reached the place he held without great ability and extraordinary capacity for leadership. By virtue of his place he became a focus of world attention as soon as the great war began. Before the armistice was signed he had become a great moral leader with the ear of the peoples of the world. Only as such could he have forced upon the allied world the unofficial acceptance of his project of a league of nations, with its fourteen points as set forth to congress January 18, 1918.

Abroad and at Home.

The enthusiasm evoked by President Wilson's visits to Paris, London and Rome was proof of his unique place in the regard of the people. It was evident that he was to Europeans not so much a man as a voice—a voice putting into words what they wanted and had not been able to express; his ideas and ideals were a sort of religion to them.

But he showed himself a statesman as well as a voice. He played the game masterfully. He established sympathy between himself and his man or his crowd. He made few if any mistakes in taste or judgment. He "matched his mind," to use his own expression, with the best of Europe and he got his league of nations before the peace conference and got it adopted.

President Wilson's two months in Europe may be divided into phases. When he landed the attitude toward the league of nations was this: The government of France was antagonistic; Great Britain's was suspicious; Italy's was skeptical. The first phase, his triumphant progress through France, England and Italy opened the eyes of these governments to his hold on the people. The second phase, the preliminary work of the peace conference, convinced these governments that President Wilson had an idea rather than a set plan which he purposed to force upon them. This simplified the situation and the rush to climb on the bandwagon began.

Contemporary estimates of President Wilson at home were as wide apart as the poles. Senator J. Thomas Hedlin (Dem., Ala.), when representative spoke on the floor of "Woodrow Wilson, the greatest apostle of world liberty and democracy since Jesus Christ." Senator Thomas W. Hardwick (Dem.) of Georgia, said January 21 in the senate: "I believe in a written constitution of R. . . and I believe that unless we leave and abandon this mad saturation of imperialism here at home and return to the ancient principles of our fathers there will be no safety nor

Senator Albert B. Cummins (Rep.) of Iowa expressed the half-way view when he said in the senate January 23: "I think President Wilson is the most intensely practical statesman of this or any other day. He began his administration in the belief that the executive office had not the power that it ought to have. He has accomplished more in the direction in which he set his face and his mind than any other man, either in this generation or in any former generation; and the only criticism, if it be a criticism, is that he has not marched in the right direction and has done things that he ought not to have done."

In the process of wrestling from congress all the powers he believed the Constitution conferred upon the executive, President Wilson made many political enemies who questioned not his ability, but his motives and methods. To particularize would be largely to review the political history of the last six years. The railroad situation, however, may be cited as an example. Representative E. E. Denison (Rep.) of Illinois said January 15, 1919, "Government ownership of railroads will be the dominant political issue in the next national campaign and Mr. McAdoo will of course expect to be the candidate of his party. He will hope to capitalize what has been done for the railroad men."

President Wilson was re-elected in 1916 upon a peace platform. October 25, 1918, just before the congressional elections, he issued an appeal to the voters of the United States asking them, if they had approved of his leadership and wished him to continue to be their unembarrassed spokesman in affairs at home and abroad, to express themselves unmistakably to that effect by returning a Democratic majority to both houses. The result of the elections was to change the political complexion of both houses as follows: 65th congress—Senate, 51 Democrats and 45 Republicans; house, 215 Republicans and 213 Democrats; 66th congress—Senate, 47 Democrats and 49 Republicans; house, 239 Republicans and 193 Democrats.

President Wilson in attending the peace conference made several new departures. He left the country during office. He took the office with him, signing acts and making appointments while in Paris. He ignored the senate, though he is empowered by the Constitution to make treaties "by and with the advice and consent of the senate."

He appointed as the American representatives himself, Secretary of State Robert Lansing, Henry White, Edward M. House and General Tasker H. Bliss. He sailed December 4, 1918, and arrived at Paris December 14. The French capital was en fete for the occasion. December 24 he went to England and thence to Italy. He returned to Paris January 8, after a journey that resembled a "triumphal procession."

After the preliminary sessions of the peace conference President Wilson returned to the United States in February, returning to Paris March 15, 1919, he signed the peace treaty June 28, 1919, and returned to the United States July 8. His second term as president expired March 3, 1920.

After his retirement from the presidency Mr. Wilson lived quietly, making a partly successful fight to regain his health. He occasionally went to the theatre and rode much in his car about the environs of Washington. He bought a home in Washington and in 1921 formed a law partnership with Bainbridge Colby, who had been his secretary of state, succeeding Robert Lansing. He took part in the funeral procession of President Harding in Washington and was the recipient of much public attention.

 Mr. Wilson's last public utterance was last fall. November 10, 1923, the eve of Armistice day, he spoke by radio to the American people, defending his peace policy and saying that the American people had withdrawn into a "sultry and selfish isolation which is deeply ignoble because manifestly cowardly and dishonorable."

Armistice day Mr. Wilson briefly addressed thousands from the front steps of his home, concluding thus:

"I am not one of those that have the least anxiety about the triumph of the principles I have stood for. I have seen fools resist Providence before and I have seen their destruction, as will come upon these again—utter destruction and contempt. That we shall prevail is as sure as that God reigns. Thank you."

Chronology of Wilson.

Woodrow Wilson was born December 28, 1856, in Staunton, Va. He was the son of Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, a Presbyterian minister, and Jessie (Woodrow) Wilson. In 1885 he married Ellen Louise Axsen. Tax Returns Show More Women Are in Business

Washington.—Women are more active now in the business world than ever before in the history of the nation. Treasury department statistics show that since the war the number of women who earn incomes large enough to be taxed has tripled.

For the tax year 1921 there were 89,634 wives who filed income tax returns separately from their husbands' returns, upon which a tax of $43,541,348 was paid. For the same year women who were heads of families filed 115,356 income tax returns, on which $10,848,457 was collected in tax, while all other women filed 608,829 income tax returns, on which $58,610,664 was taxed.

For the tax year 1920 there were 77,558 wives, separate from their husbands, who filed income tax returns; women who were heads of families filed 132,181 tax returns, while all other women filed 502,690.

Incompatibility.
 It is said that the average Chicago family spends fifty-one cents a year for books, and we do not see any immediate hope of friendly relations being established between the Windy city and Boston.—Newark (O.) Advocate.

Wood Rat's Peculiar Trick.
The wood rat, common in the northwestern part of the United States, has this peculiar trait: It leaves bits of wood, leaves or trash as substitutes for the materials it carries away.

Microbes With a Double Life.
The transformation of microbes from one form to another has been described by many investigators, and it has even been suggested that the same microbe in different forms may be responsible for different diseases.

Oldest Historical Tree.

The oldest historical tree (not the oldest tree) is one in Ceylon. It is known to have been planted, as a cutting from the Bo tree under which Gautama meditated, in the year 245 B. C. From that time to this it has been carefully tended and watered; its great branches are supported by pillars, and the earth has been terraced up about it so that it has been able to put out fresh roots continually.

The total area of the Japanese archipelago is 148,756 square miles and the total area of the empire, with Korea and all other possessions, is 290,738 square miles, with a population of 56,745,000. The population of the Japanese possessions is more than 77,000,000. A considerable portion of Japan is uninhabitable, which accounts for some of the congestion in certain parts.

Hard on the Visitor.

A lady friend of our family, who has always been a hard worker on public affairs in our town, was made the chairman of the central committee for women when women became voters. Naturally she is quite interested in politics, and whenever she and my husband meet they have quite a political talk, he being an election judge in our precinct. Just before a close election she called up and said she would drop in for a few moments that evening. I mentioned at supper that she was coming. As my husband was very tired, he said he did not feel very sociable and would go upstairs to read and go to bed early. Our company came, and during the evening inquired about my husband, when, to my great embarrassment, my young son answered for everybody with, "When dad heard you were coming he beat it to bed."—Chicago Tribune.

Held Whiskers Sacred.
If the beard has any standing in the world today, it is undoubtedly because of the Jews, who held their whiskers to be sacred, and swore by them. Later, the Turks did the same. The sultan's followers used to comb their whiskers after prayers, catch the hairs that came out, break them in two and bury them, on the theory that in some mysterious way the hairs helped to make soft walking to the gates of paradise. This the Turks firmly believed.

White Pearls Most Valuable.
Pearls that come from the coast of Australia are of many shapes and colors. Those under ten grains are sold by the ounce; above that by the grain. Color has a deal to do with the value. The white pearls go mostly to Europe and the yellow ones to India. In Australia an ounce of good white pearls will fetch up to $500, but sometimes realize only a fifth of that amount. The yellow pearls may be rated on an average of about half the value of the white ones.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN IN LUCK
Not Only Recovered Gun He Carried During Four Years of Strife, but His Canteen.

Former Governor MacCorkle of West Virginia, having read in the Youth's Companion the story of an overseas veteran who found in a store where renovated army goods were for sale the cap he had worn in France, sends to that paper the account of an even more remarkable coincidence that he witnessed.

When I was governor of West Virginia in 1893, he says, a veteran of the Civil war came into my office to get some information about pension matters. I told him where he could find it, and we had some talk about his four years in the army. I told him I had taken the old army material that was assigned to West Virginia after the war, had got it into order and put it where it could be seen.

I took him up to the armory where the old material was and showed it to him. "I carried my gun," he said "for four years through the war and cut my name on the stock, and have often wondered what became of the old piece."

He picked up several of the old minie rifles, pointed them and remarked that they seemed natural to him. After he had picked up the third one and pointed it, a look of incredulous amazement came over his face. He handed the gun to me and said: "Governor, here is the gun that I carried for four years." Looking upon the stock, I found there cut his name, his company, his regiment and the name of his home town. He stood there with tears in his eyes and hugged the old gun to his breast.

That is not all. There was a huge pile of old army canteens. "My old canteen," he said, "had my name on it the same as my musket." He walked over and looked over the pile of canteens, and with another exclamation of surprise took up one of them. There among the dents and knocks of four years' service was scratched his name, residence, regiment and company.

I need hardly say that the old veteran went home hugging to his bosom both the gun and the canteen.

Human Tank.
John, tipping the scale at 278 pounds, on a motor trip through Colorado arrived in a little town about 1 p. m. and was exceedingly hungry. He saw what appeared to be a restaurant. Parking his car, he entered the restaurant. Some one, with a once-white apron, approached from behind curtains. John inquired, "Do you serve meals here?" The man with the apron sized him up from top to bottom, and finally answered: "We do, but we do not fill up silos."

Three Valuable Observations
"Life, health, happiness and success depend largely upon our ability to overthrow a fault, bridle a wrong inclination and overcome our own weakness." "Self is the one big enemy with which every one must deal hand to hand—it must be trained and disciplined to do the bidding of the intellect. Mind must rule matter in order for us to do anything worth while." "Self-denial and self-restraint are the foundation stones of real character."

Those Good Old Times.
The literature of the ancients, written in mud, had to be baked well before given circulation. Some of the authors probably had to get stewed before they could do their work effectively.—Nashville Banner.

Held Whiskers Sacred.
If the beard has any standing in the world today, it is undoubtedly because of the Jews, who held their whiskers to be sacred, and swore by them. Later, the Turks did the same. The sultan's followers used to comb their whiskers after prayers, catch the hairs that came out, break them in two and bury them, on the theory that in some mysterious way the hairs helped to make soft walking to the gates of paradise. This the Turks firmly believed.

White Pearls Most Valuable.
Pearls that come from the coast of Australia are of many shapes and colors. Those under ten grains are sold by the ounce; above that by the grain. Color has a deal to do with the value. The white pearls go mostly to Europe and the yellow ones to India. In Australia an ounce of good white pearls will fetch up to $500, but sometimes realize only a fifth of that amount. The yellow pearls may be rated on an average of about half the value of the white ones.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN IN LUCK
Not Only Recovered Gun He Carried During Four Years of Strife, but His Canteen.

Former Governor MacCorkle of West Virginia, having read in the Youth's Companion the story of an overseas veteran who found in a store where renovated army goods were for sale the cap he had worn in France, sends to that paper the account of an even more remarkable coincidence that he witnessed.

When I was governor of West Virginia in 1893, he says, a veteran of the Civil war came into my office to get some information about pension matters. I told him where he could find it, and we had some talk about his four years in the army. I told him I had taken the old army material that was assigned to West Virginia after the war, had got it into order and put it where it could be seen.

I took him up to the armory where the old material was and showed it to him. "I carried my gun," he said "for four years through the war and cut my name on the stock, and have often wondered what became of the old piece."

He picked up several of the old minie rifles, pointed them and remarked that they seemed natural to him. After he had picked up the third one and pointed it, a look of incredulous amazement came over his face. He handed the gun to me and said: "Governor, here is the gun that I carried for four years." Looking upon the stock, I found there cut his name, his company, his regiment and the name of his home town. He stood there with tears in his eyes and hugged the old gun to his breast.

That is not all. There was a huge pile of old army canteens. "My old canteen," he said, "had my name on it the same as my musket." He walked over and looked over the pile of canteens, and with another exclamation of surprise took up one of them. There among the dents and knocks of four years' service was scratched his name, residence, regiment and company.

I need hardly say that the old veteran went home hugging to his bosom both the gun and the canteen.

Cynicism.

There is no place like "Harry's". Light lunch, soup, roast pork, sandwiches. All confections. The Standard Candy Kitchen. 29janyd6.

Human Tank.
John, tipping the scale at 278 pounds, on a motor trip through Colorado arrived in a little town about 1 p. m. and was exceedingly hungry. He saw what appeared to be a restaurant. Parking his car, he entered the restaurant. Some one, with a once-white apron, approached from behind curtains. John inquired, "Do you serve meals here?" The man with the apron sized him up from top to bottom, and finally answered: "We do, but we do not fill up silos."

Three Valuable Observations
"Life, health, happiness and success depend largely upon our ability to overthrow a fault, bridle a wrong inclination and overcome our own weakness." "Self is the one big enemy with which every one must deal hand to hand—it must be trained and disciplined to do the bidding of the intellect. Mind must rule matter in order for us to do anything worth while." "Self-denial and self-restraint are the foundation stones of real character."

How to Keep Rubber Soft.
A prominent tire manufacturer says that an excellent way to prevent hardening of inner tubes when they are stored for the winter is to place them in hot water once a month or every six weeks. They should be immersed for just a couple of minutes, and should then be carefully dried and partly inflated before being hung up again. This treatment serves to keep the rubber pliable and soft.

Hotel Stenographer
BY ROE FULKERSON

"There goes a lucky guy," exclaimed the Hotel Stenographer. He has got a wad that would calk a liner after a collision with an iceberg and he's a bachelor."

"Why don't you grab him?" asked the House Detective.

"He's puncture proof, or some woman would have landed him before he was 40," replied the girl.

"Maybe you do not want to get married either," said the House Detective.

"Kelly, there is a difference between a man getting married and a woman doing the same. A man never gets married until he finds a woman he can't live without. A woman gets married as soon as she can find a man she can live with.

"Matrimony is the hope of a woman and the despair of a man. One never commits it as long as he can keep from it and the other commits it as soon as she gets a chance.

"If you see any good reason why I should sit here at this desk and pound the keys of this typewriter when I could be wielding a dust rag in a two room and bath apartment, your eyesight is better than mine.

"If you can see any reason why some good looking bachelor should pay rent and clothes for me in that same two room and bath apartment, you are some seer.

"There is no good reason why every woman shouldn't marry the first eligible man who asks her and there isn't any reason why any man should ask her as long as he can live without her.

"That's the reason, that all thru life you see women pursuing and men dodging matrimony. That's the reason a woman paints her face, curls her hair and, having baited the hook and landed a sucker, then sits down to a life of dressing gowns, magazines and caramels. She has done her stuff so why worry?"

"I know, I fell," agreed Kelly, sympathetically.

REVIVAL NOTES.
Sunday was a great day at the Evangelical church. Morning, afternoon and evening the revival fires kept burning until late Sunday night. Some have found salvation, full and free and a new day of hope and faith has dawned upon them, much good is being done.

How to Keep Rubber Soft.
A prominent tire manufacturer says that an excellent way to prevent hardening of inner tubes when they are stored for the winter is to place them in hot water once a month or every six weeks. They should be immersed for just a couple of minutes, and should then be carefully dried and partly inflated before being hung up again. This treatment serves to keep the rubber pliable and soft.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"There goes a lucky guy," exclaimed the Hotel Stenographer. He has got a wad that would talk a liner after a collision with an iceberg and he's a bachelor."

"Why don't you grab him?" asked the House Detective.

"He's puncture proof, or some woman would have landed him before he was 40," replied the girl.

"Maybe you do not want to get married either," said the House Detective.

"Kelly, there is a difference between a man getting married and a woman doing the same. A man never gets married until he finds a woman he can't live without. A woman gets married as soon as she can find a man she can live with."

"Matrimony is the hope of a woman and the despair of a man. One never commits it as long as he can keep from it and the other commits it as soon as she gets a chance."

"If you see any good reason why I should sit here at this desk and pound the keys of this typewriter when I could be wielding a dust rag in a two room and bath apartment, your eyesight is better than mine."

"If you can see any reason why some good looking bachelor should pay rent and clothes for me in that same two room and bath apartment, you are some seer."

"There is no good reason why every woman shouldn't marry the first eligible man who asks her and there isn't any reason why any man should ask her as long as he can live without her."

"That's the reason, that all thru life you see women pursuing and men dodging matrimony. That's the reason a woman paints her face, curls her hair and, having baited the hook and landed a sucker, then sits down to a life of dressing gowns, magazines and caramels. She has done her stuff so why worry?"

"I know, I fell," agreed Kelly, sympathetically.
